

Soup anyone? Cotswold School ESOL English Speakers of Other Languages (ESOL) students Jinny Kim, left and Ann Kim, right, from Korea cut the school's own-grown pumpkins ready to be made into soup to share with the school during one of the wettest weeks on record. Grown from the school's own no-dig garden, the pumpkins were put to good use and well received by all classes, some of whom had a go at making their own bread to go with it. Last term, William from Room 18 guessed the correct weight of the largest pumpkin grown in the school gardens, weighing in at 6.95 kilograms.
